

excerpted from

Atlantic

JULY 1980 VOLUME 246 No. 1

NEW YORK

AUGUST 4, 1980/NEW YORK

Saturday Review July 1980

Harper's

JULY 1980 /VOL. 261, NO. 1562

psychology today AUGUST 1980

Newsweek

AUGUST 18, 1980

JULY 1980

Esquire

No alumni reunion was ever like this.

We're proud of this picture.

It's the first ever published of Delancey Street graduates. We took it because people keep asking us, "What happens to ex-drunks, ex-cons and ex-junkies after they leave the house?"

We'd like you to meet some of our graduates.

The folks are (from left to right) Susan Donnelly, account executive for the Walter W. Cribbins Co., and a photographic model; Pat Donnelly and Tim Kennard, partners in Bug & Hare Repair, a Volkswagen repair shop; Sylvester Herring, Appropriate Technology Coordinator for the California Conservation Corps and the California Council of Criminal Justice; Ken Hepper, a supervisor for Varian, Inc.; Bill Zant, pre-med student; Laura Swartz, attorney; Bill Maher, attorney and member of the San Francisco School Board; and Jose Amador, ambulance medical technician.

Doesn't fit the image, does it? People expect our graduates to go roaring out into the world to a job pumping gas or cleaning johns.

That's where we're different.

We do more than separate people from destructive lifestyles. We assist them into challenging life directions.

We have a number of self-supporting schools (our stylish Union Street restaurant is one of them) that give our residents the opportunity to gain experience in meaningful jobs.

We pay their way to local colleges and universities. And we offer a taste of the good life by locating ourselves . . . not in the slums . . . but in places like Pacific Heights. What better way to stimulate ambition than to rub shoulders with successful people?

We could go on and tell you about our other graduates. Like Barbara Stern, who's Program Director for the Care Unit at Alta Bates Hospital. And Bill Tolliver, who rose from the walking dead to a new career as a mortician. (we rib him about that.)

One final question people have is—"Who's the cop in the picture?"

He's Oral Nelson; member of the San Francisco Sheriff's Department . . . and a Delancey Street graduate, too.

We couldn't be more proud.

Thanks to your donations (tax exempt, of course) and your support, Delancey Street Foundation has become the most unique rehabilitation program of its kind in the nation. Maybe even the world.

Just ask our graduates.

For further information contact us at 2563 Divisadero, San Francisco. (415) 563-5326.

DELANCEY
STREET
FOUNDATION
INC.

Our business is self-reliance.